Death

28 0 1

Chapter 1 by Carter

When we are born we are entitled to only one thing in this world, just one. A death. That's right, the one thing this society needs to function is death, so what would happen if we took that away. First there would be chaos, everyone running around thinking they are immortal, and endless war with soldiers still screaming as the bullets whiz through their heads. Then the government would try to fix it, laws would be put into place about the population as to not overpopulate the earth. Then they would enforce all laws with an iron fist, all police would carry semi-automatic weapons, and law breakers would be publicly 'killed'. Yes killed, they would make one's life so unbearable by using a traditional method of killing. A shot to the heart causing blood flow to cease and not giving the victim any control over their body. A hanging where one would break another's spine disabling them in such a way where they can still process everything that is happening. This chaos, this sheer pain, is my life.
